Kitcher Risk Solutions extends systems review and assurance services

After three years of service provision to the Australian, European and North American rail market Kitcher Risk Solutions is extending its service offering to rail operator and engineering services provider customers.

New services include systems engineering and rail safety management system review involving expert, independent advice on gaps, strengths, weaknesses and recommended improvements.

“Kitcher Risk Solutions has always been expert in rail safety and risk management as well as providing support to rail and utility companies who want to improve their leadership skills or safety critical worker competence and fitness.” founder Clare Kitcher said. “We’re very excited to be able to offer more to our customers through our new services.”

The new services give customers bespoke business management solutions aligned to strategic objectives, culture and compliance needs. Saving time on achieving the right systems and processes for their business.

The system assurance provided by Kitcher Risk Solutions gives customers the confidence that their systems, designs and assets will operate as intended throughout their life and that the residual risk being carrying can be demonstrated as acceptable.
